SWIMMERS TOLD WHAT NOT TO DO AND WHAT TO DO

As thousands of Atlantans plunged into the cooling waters of the city swimming pools upon the season's opening this past week, the Atlanta Red Cross issued the "do's and don'ts" of swimming and offered free courses to any persons who wish to learn to swim.

The Red Cross warned that all the family should be "water-proofed" for the summer—that is, learn emergency treatments and the simple rules of safe swimming.

Here are the 10 commandments:

1. Select a swimming pool or beach that is already protected by a qualified life guard or see that one is on duty while your party is in swimming.

2. Wait at least one hour after eating before you go for a swim.

3. Don't spoil your vacation by assuming that sunburn is not dangerous if you want a suntan, get it gradually over a period of weeks.

4. Gradually immerse the body in water—dash water in the face, rubbing water on arms, neck and chest before getting wet all over.

5. Numbness may affect the arms and legs to such an extent that they may be temporarily paralyzed.

6. Don't drink if you swim. Don't swim if you drink.

7. Never swim alone. You may need assistance or someone to call for help. Swim with a buddy close by.

8. Look before diving. Be sure the water is at least eight feet deep and free from hidden stumps and rocks.

9. Always take a boat along for long-distance swimming.

10. Avoid long swims after a season of inactivity—train gradually.

11. Don't be a "show-off" and try to hold your buddy down—ducking may cause serious damage.

Other Warnings. Those rules cover the principal dangers in swimming but the Red Cross goes even further to warn of hazards to be avoided on other outings and vacations.

1. Fourth of July celebrations—burns, loss of fingers and eyesight.

2. Picnics and outings.

3. Poison ivy and sumac.

4. Excessive heat; heat exhaustion; sun stroke.

5. Fires in summer homes, use of oil, lamps, stoves, etc.

6. Electric fans.

7. Bicycles.

Recommend Sports. The Atlanta chapter of the Red Cross encourages everyone to learn to play games—both land and water games, while swimming. It increases swimming ability.

For those wishing to learn to swim under Red Cross instructors, arrangements can be made at any city pool or by telephoning Walnut 3201.

BINGO! LIGHTS OUT, POLICE HIT JACKPOT

Winder, which they sought to serve as state officers.

But, whoever his deputies were, it was Sheriff Mason's bailiwick and the sheriff took charge.

Sheriff Takes Charge. The sheriff calmly informed the guests that they would be permitted to go unmolested and would be asked to give names, real or otherwise. The lights were legitimately off and there was no play going on, so the officers couldn't file any charges of actual gambling.

Sheriff Mason took charge of the bingo setup, several slot machines, numerous pairs of dice, decks of cards, two roulette wheels, a giant "ferris wheel," chips and an unannounced amount of cash.

The raiders also confiscated a number of checks, some of them apparently good and others definitely of the "rubber" variety. Names of persons well known in Atlanta social circles were said to have been found on both varieties.

Five Freed on Bond. The sheriff and his aides, who by the way included two members of the state highway patrol, effectively urged all except the five volunteers to leave quietly. He accepted bonds of $1,000 each from the five who gave their names as J. N. Williams, W. N. Flynn Jr., J. W. Hogg, J. D. Barney and T. R. Gravelley, after telephoning to his office in Lawrenceville for the bond blanks, which were rushed to him by automobile. The operators signed up right on the scene.

The sheriff didn't elucidate on the complaints he had received. Anyway, the Gardens were still dark last night, although by the time the electricity had finished his job, so had the sheriff and his unidentified deputies.

Politics
Trickery Charged In Pension Vote

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(P)—Representative Martin J. Kennedy, Democrat, New York, accused the house ways and means committee today of engaging in a "shameless piece of sly trickery" in reporting out for house action the Townsend old age pension bill.

In a statement in which he predicted that not more than 75 votes would be cast for the bill, Kennedy expressed his contempt for the action of a group of "staple men" in bringing anguish and suffering to more than 8,000,000 persons who have passed the age of 60 and have been bamboozled by the promise that they have reached the next floor from heaven.

"Lynching is too good for such persons," he said.

"That is what the ways and means committee and the rules committee have said to these 8,000,000 persons: Come all ye faithful! Vote for me!"

"It may be good politics, for that is all it is—simply a maneuver to 'sizzle' some Republican members."

The ways and means committee reported the Townsend bill "without recommendation." Advocates of the plan had demanded a vote of the measure.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(P)—The Republican National Committee estimated today that Republican Governors and legislatures would save the states more than $100,000,000 in the next two years by restoring "sanity" to unbalanced budgets "inherited from Democratic predecessors."

Citing various reductions already effected and asserting that more were in progress, the committee said in a statement that the Republican administrations were reducing government costs "by every means available, including the elimination or consolidation of services which may be curtailed, reducing their payrolls and tightening up loose administrative agencies."

In New York, the statement said, the Republican controlled legislature has reduced the budget of Democratic Governor Herbert H. Lehman by $24,000,000 and has balanced the budget for 1940 with an estimated surplus of $616,808.

Other savings were listed as follows: Idaho, $500,000; Kansas, $688,067; and Ohio more than $13,000,000 in the next biennium; Rhode Island $1,000,000 for the fiscal year ending in 1940, and Iowa $1,100,000 for each year of the next biennium.

CRIME
Baby Decapitation Charged to Father

LANCASTER, S. C., May 28.—(P)—Neal Brown, a young cotton mill worker, was arrested today on a warrant charging him with decapitating his six-month-old baby with a butcher knife.

Police Chief H. A. Montgomery quoted Brown's wife as saying: "Neal came home crazy drunk this morning and threatened to kill me. Then he hit the baby and I thought he killed it. I ran to a neighbor's for help."

Montgomery said that when he and two officers arrived at the Brown home they found nearly all the windows shattered, and Brown was badly cut from the broken glass.

The baby, Montgomery said, was found on the floor, its head severed from its body. The butcher knife lay near by.

At the inquest this afternoon a statement was read to the jury which Coroner F. L. Blackman said was obtained from the 23-year-old Brown.

"I killed the baby and if I had it to do all over, I'd do it again. I was drinking, but I knew what I was doing. I would have killed myself, too, if I had had a shotgun handy. I didn't want my baby to be raised in sin."

Brown's 17-year-old wife testified that "before the baby was born Neal said he was going to take out an insurance policy on its life. I told him and swear it was an accident."

Hull's Proposal On Embargo Hit

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(P)—Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, asserted today that the practical effect of Secretary Hull's recommendation for revision of the neutrality act would be to "make an arsenal out of the United States."

Questioning the wisdom of permitting arms sales to nations at war, as Hull proposed, the veteran Republican member of the senate foreign relations committee said he felt this would not serve "the cause of peace or humanity in any way."

Mingled praise and criticism in the reaction of other legislators.

RELIGION
Hyde Park Pastor Reproves Roosevelt

HYDE PARK, N. Y., May 28.—(P)—President Roosevelt, attending Whitsunday services at St. James Episcopal church, heard himself and other members of the parish mildly reproved today for not showing more enthusiasm for church work.

Before delivering his sermon to the members of the small congregation, the Rev. Frank R. Wilson outlined arrangements for June 11 when the heads of two great nations will worship at the humble little church.

He said every parishioner must have a ticket. He said secret service and state police had arranged for those who could not get into the church to gather on the lawn outside and "come quite close to see their majesties," King George and Queen Elizabeth of England.

The minister selected Whitsunday, "the day when the church originated," to say that while people have just as much money now as in the past for the church, "they have cut the church out."

"Try to get a Bible class or any such study group started. My goodness, people just don't have time for that," he said.

"We have a lot of heathen right in Hyde Park, yet we rarely go to any one and say: 'Is there anything I can do to make you happy in a church home?'"

Although the President had a slight cold, he drove to church with his mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, in an open car. He was nearly 10 minutes late but the pastor waited to greet him at the door.

After the services, he chatted with friends for 15 minutes, then drove back to his country home.

Pension Fund At $32,989,500.

NEW YORK, May 28.—(P)—The church pension fund of the Protestant Episcopal church today reported assets of $32,989,500 as of December 31, 1938.

Expressing this viewpoint, Senator George, Democrat, Georgia, said the proposal to repeal the mandatory embargo on arms sales to belligerents was "certain to meet with such stubborn opposition in the senate as to foreclose action on it within the next 60 days."

As to his own views, George said he thought several features of Hull's program "possess great merit" and indicated he might support it, with some reservations.

Four peace organizations criticized Hull's proposals in a joint statement asserting that it was "a serious reflection on the intelligence of the American people that they would rather risk peace than the profits of war."

The statement came from the National Council for the Prevention of War, the Woman's International League for Peace and Freedom, World Peaceways, and the Fellowship of Reconciliation.

AVIATION
Airlines Chalk Up Record of Safety

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(P)—Commercial Airlines operating in the domestic and foreign service of the United States flew 34,390,026 passenger miles for each passenger killed during the last six months of 1938, the Air Safety Board reported today.

Scheduled airlines operating only in the United States traveled 76,645,172 passenger miles for each passenger fatality.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(P)—Exports of aircraft products from the United States totaled $7,458,519 in April, a decline of 3 per cent from the previous month, the Department of Commerce announced today.

First U. S. Testing Station Will Open

INDIANAPOLIS, May 28.—(P)—The Civil Aeronautics Authority will dedicate at Municipal airport today the first complete federal testing station for safety devices used in commercial aviation.

The station will test radio transmitters and receivers, blind landing equipment, radio beams, compasses, airport lights and the like.

The Works Progress Administration built it at a cost of $100,000. The CAA will install $800,000 worth of equipment and a staff of 30 aeronautical experts.

The station includes a hangar, 150 by 120 feet, built to house four-engine transport planes, and two runways for testing runway materials.

SUPREME COURT
Another Vacancy For Roosevelt?

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(P)—The supreme court nears the end of its term with four of nine members sitting by appointment of President Roosevelt and much capital speculation over whether he may not have a fifth vacancy to fill when the court reconvenes in October.

The capital has heard reports that Justice James C. McReynolds may retire some time after the present session ends June 5. Although there is no authoritative indication as to his intentions, the belief is general that he has been weighing the question.

Two Swimmers Conquer Canyon

SANDESON, Texas, May 28.—(P)—Two weary, sunburned brothers emerged from the wild Big Bend country today—conquerors of the treacherous Santa Helena canyon of the Rio Grande.

Roy L. Swift, 27-year-old Robstown (Texas) editor, and W. E. Swift, 37, Brownwood, Texas, completed the dangerous 21-mile trip last night.

Wearing swimming suits, heavy hats, knee pads and tennis shoes and carrying inner tubes they waded and walked the first 10 miles.

"From there on the walls rise 1,000 to 2,000 feet," said Roy Swift.

"Two miles farther down the river there were places in which no swimmer could live and we used ropes to get over and around the boulders."

Kuhn Offers To Resign

MILWAUKEE, May 28.—(P)—Fritz Kuhn, national leader of the German-American Volksbund, last night proclaimed his innocence of charges of embezzling $14,548 from the national fund and declared he was being persecuted by Thomas Dewey, New York district attorney.

Kuhn, addressing about 1,200 attending a Milwaukee Bund meeting, said:

"I never stole your money. I am not responsible to any district attorney. I am responsible only to you. If you want me to quit I will be only too glad to step down. I never said I was going to get a divorce. It is all lies."

The action, Kuhn said, was to

Nazis Ban Radio Sermons

BERLIN, May 28.—(AP)—Devout Protestants and Catholics listened in vain today for Sunday religious programs on the air.

Inquiry disclosed that Germany has banned radio broadcasts of religious services and that the Nazi government also is putting a curb on the sale of Bibles and church tracts.

Orders such as the radio ban are not published but are transmitted secretly by the propaganda ministry to the government broadcasting administration. Examination of radio programs for the past four weeks indicated that radio sermons had disappeared unannounced, possibly months ago.

The radio, it was explained, is a government institution and the government is not a "confessional" church body.

Church officials have urged that the broadcasts be resumed for the benefit of invalids and those who live far from churches but their requests have found official ears deaf.

A new order of the Reich's literary chamber, an adjunct of the propaganda ministry, provides that Bibles and religious tracts may be put on display only in confessional book stores. In general book stores Bibles may be sold only when specifically ordered.

There are few stores devoted solely to the sale of religious literature in Germany.

A further order by the chamber provides that Bible or tract societies no longer may subsidize book publishers but that all such publications must pay for themselves.

Religious circles contend that publication of tracts usually is possible only because the publisher is subsidized by societies interested in distribution of these tracts. Reports reaching officials of the Protestant Confessional synod also indicate that the state has declined to pay its customary subsidies to a considerable number of Lutheran and Evangelical ministers who have not whole-heartedly embraced Nazism.

FRANCE

Fred Snite Sees Shrine Procession

LOURDES, France, May 28.—(AP)—Fred B. Snite Jr., the man in the "iron lung," saw the penitential procession of the blessed sacrament at the Lourdes Shrine today amid a group of invalids from Leeds, England.

Earlier in the afternoon the Chicago infantile paralysis victim, who made a 5,000-mile pilgrimage here in his mechanical respirator, was placed in his streamlined trailer for a two-hour trip through the Pyrenees mountains.

A group of 400 pilgrims, headed by the Bishop of Leeds, included 62 invalids who watched the procession from places near the trailer in which Snite's "iron lung" is carried.

About 10,000 persons saw the procession of the sacrament, one of the largest pilgrimages held at the shrine this year. More than 2,000 pilgrims took part in the procession itself.

RUSSIA

Stalin Purges Garden Plots

MOSCOW, May 28.—(AP)—A dramatic decree aimed at "counterfeit collective farmers" was issued today by Joseph Stalin and Premier Vyacheslav Molotov to restrict rigidly the size of private garden plots.

Unscrupulous collective farm members, the decree said, have been resorting to trickery to increase the size of their individual plots. It said some have devoted their whole time cultivating their own ground to the neglect of collective farm community interests.

The result, it charged, has been an artificial labor shortage. Soviet Russia's labor discipline drive, which has increased industrial production, previously had been extended to agriculture through specific time schedules for farm workers, rewards for industrious workers and penalties for shirkers.

Some workers, however, were accused by the decree of having been able to grab so much additional land that they have begun selling or leasing it.

The new edict ordered careful measurement of all household garden plots and demanded that wherever they exceed the legal limit—varying from about half an acre in fertile areas to two and one-half acres in arid sections—the surplus land be added to the collective fields.

Henceforth, also, collective farmers may work for themselves only after working for the community.

Lower House Votes Huge Budget

MOSCOW, May 28.—(AP)—The Soviet Union (lower house) of Russia's parliament today approved a budget calling for 156,097,829,000 rubles (nominally $29,502,489,681) in revenue and 155,447,829,000 rubles ($29,379,639,681) in expenditures.

Included in the budget were estimated expenditures of 40,885,000,000 ($7,727,265,000) for defense. Winding up the debate which began after submission of the budget Thursday, Arseni Zvereff, finance commissar, agreed with several motions made by deputies concerning an increase in allocations for local needs, and audit and control of works organs.

ITALY

Armed Women March for Duce

ROME, May 28.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini exalted the part Italian women are playing in Italy's march to greater power today in a brief speech before 700 representatives of women's Fascist organizations.

Il Duce appeared on his balcony at Venezia palace to address his huge audience after legions of women and girls, some bearing bayoneted rifles, had marched past him in a mammoth parade along the Street of Empire.

The paraders represented all branches of activities of women's Fascist organizations—the training of women for colonial life, for nursing, anti-aircraft defense and industrial work to replace men in the event of war.

From all parts of the Italian kingdom and empire they gathered at Il Duce's call for a demonstration of Italian womanhood. Units of women have participated in men's parades in the past but this was the first time they had held a big parade of their own.

"I am not breaking my rule," the Premier told them, "if I feel the need of telling you—as I do tell you—that you have been the protagonists of a great, of an unforgettable day of Fascism worthy of you and of Fascism's 20th anniversary."

The mention of the "rule" was in reference to his statement eight days ago at Cuervo that he intended to remain silent after the speeches of his Piedmont tour.

"You have appeared and you have marched in superb manner, truly Fascist, and you have shown yourselves to be a dependable force in the service of the country and its regime," Il Duce continued. "To all of you, my best wishes, my greetings and my praise."

In contrast to the khaki-uniformed women preparing to settle in the far reaches of Libya and Ethiopia as wives of colonists, were rural housewives in bright peasant costumes among the marchers.

Small rifles designed especially for women were carried by those going to the colonies. These women are being trained to shoot.

Among the spectators were several hundred members of women's Nazi organizations who came here from Germany for the event.

POLAND

General Pledges Czech Legions

WARSAW, May 28.—(AP)—A general in the former Czech army, who came here after fleeing from Prague, predicted today that Germany would have trouble in the protectorate of Moravia in the event of a German-Polish war.

The general, Lev Prjaha, former delegate of Czechoslovakia to Ruthenia, declared in an interview.

"Anti-German feeling in Moravia increases hourly. Should war break out between Poland and Germany the nation of Hitler will learn what tricks we can play."

"The present rapid Germanization of Moravia aims to separate us from Poland by a German wall but we will know how to ruin that wall."

"The entire Czech nation lives with the single thought of Czech legions being formed in Poland and France and it is this thought which inspires us with the hope that we may again know the freedom and right to live as a people."

The general arrived last Friday with his wife and child. He said he succeeded in fleeing Prague by applying there for a foreign passport to visit his wife and child in Slovakia. After obtaining a German passport from the Czech protectorate he then obtained permission from the Gestapo (secret police) to visit Slovakia with the understanding that he was to return to Prague with his family.

In Slovakia, he said he obtained a Polish visa and came to this country.

"I am going back to Prague some day," he said grimly, "but not by using my present visa to return."

Jewish Student Killed at School

LOWOW, Poland, May 28.—(AP)—The Lowow School of Engineering has been closed temporarily, it was announced today, after a young Jew, Markus Landersberg, died of injuries suffered in a series of student disturbances.

Landersberg was the third Jewish victim of student rioting here. Last fall two Jews were fatally injured.

Authorities attribute the rioting to a long-standing quarrel among Poles, Ukrainians and Jews.

CHINA

Japanese Board German Liner

SHANGHAI, May 28.—(AP)—The German Hamburg-America Line announced today its liner Sauerland had been stopped and boarded by Japanese and a protest against the action had been made by German diplomatic representatives.

It said the incident, the third involving European liners, occurred last Wednesday when the 2,087-ton Sauerland was overhauled by a Japanese warship. The steamer, en route to Hongkong from Singapore, was almost within Hongkong waters when she was halted.

The boarding party demanded to see the ship's papers and then withdrew.

Germans said the action took place at almost the same time as the stopping and boarding of the British liner Ranpara just outside Hongkong waters.

The United States cruiser Marblehead is due here tomorrow from Kulangsu, International Settlement on a small island in the harbor of Amoy, where she steamed from Tsingtau when the crisis arose over Japanese demands for virtual control.

The deadlock between Japan on the one side and Great Britain, France and the United States over the International Settlement issue continued.

Latest reports, however, said the Japanese were indicating they might forego some of their far-reaching demands for control of the Kulangsu administration. Discussions were proceeding.

Chinese pirates roaming the mouth of the Yangtze river in junks equipped with machine-guns struck close to Shanghai tonight.

As the Portuguese steamer Tejo was passing Woosung, a few miles below Shanghai, en route here, the pirates overhauled and boarded the craft, robbing the passengers and crew.

The loot was piled overside into the waiting junks which escaped without the firing of a shot.

Warplanes Bomb American Mission

FOOCHOW, China, May 28.—(AP)—Japanese warplanes bombed Foochow twice today, killing and injuring an undetermined number of inhabitants and adding to the considerable property damage caused by five air raids last Friday.

Reports from Putien, southwest of here, said the American Methodist mission was the principal sufferer from Thursday's raids on that city by Japanese naval aircraft.

The American Methodist church, girls' school, girls' dormitory and foreign teachers' residence were destroyed but all persons attached to the mission fled to safety before the raid.

Eyewitnesses said that in recent days Japanese had turned machine-guns upon many small fishing craft, crowded not only with fishermen but also with their wives and children.

SPAIN

Ships Arrive For Italians

CADIZ, Spain, May 28.—(AP)—Three Italian troopships, the Toscana, Piemonte and Sicilia, arrived at Cadiz today after battling heavy fogs, to take back Italian troops who fought with Generalissimo Francisco Franco in the civil war.

They started loading war material immediately. The Italians are due to sail for home next Wednesday.

CANADA

Royalty Leaves For Vancouver

BANFF, Alberta, May 28.—(AP)—Refreshed after a rest of two nights and a day in this resort high in the Canadian Rockies, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth today resumed their westward trip across Canada.

They drove 56 miles through the scenic Rocky mountains from Banff to Field, B. C., where they boarded their train at 12:26 p. m. P. S. T. (3:26 p. m. Atlanta time) for Vancouver, where their program tomorrow included a full day of receptions and entertainment.

They were scheduled to reach the west coast city tomorrow morning after breaking their overnight train ride with a 15-minute pause tonight at Kamloops.

During their stay in Banff National Park, the King and Queen were free from crowds for the first time since arriving at Quebec 10 days ago on their North American tour.

They climbed a low mountain, walked alone in the woods, went for a buggy ride and realized in a large measure their expressed wish of being treated like ordinary visitors.

Quints Thrilled By Rabbit's Foot

CALLANDER, Ont., May 28.—(Canadian Press)—Gifts and greetings showered down upon the Dionne quintuplets on their fifth birthday today, but none thrilled them so much as a neatly wrapped rabbit's foot sent by an American well-wisher.

The good luck charm was among 1,600 birthday cards and hundreds of parcel post packages received from all parts of the world and left at their door by a puffing postman.

The rabbit's foot came from Alameda, Cal., and bore a card with the inscription "This should bring you luck." The quint's nurses had explained its meaning but when they caught on their cherubic faces beamed.

Special mail service was necessary to deliver the flood of parcels, cards and letters. The bulk of the mail came from the United States and Canada came a close second.

ARGENTINA

Keep to Right Or Go to Jail

BUENOS AIRES.—(By Mail)—(AP)—Pedestrians in Buenos Aires are struggling with an innovation in municipal traffic control—"keep to the right" sidewalks.

The mayor has signed a law providing fines or brief jail terms for pedestrians who fail to keep to the right on the sidewalks, who "jaywalk," or who walk in the streets.

He approved the law, despite an adverse recommendation of his board of traffic advisers, in an effort to reduce automobile-pedestrian accidents and to speed the movement of pedestrians in central portions of the city.

Since vehicular traffic keeps to the left in Buenos Aires, the law requires pedestrians to walk to the right so they will face oncoming vehicles.

Taxation Vs. National Debt

Most politicians are deathly afraid of additional taxes. Yet when these so-called "prophets of doom," who daily bemoan the high level of the federal take, are faced with the alternative of increasing the national debt they immediately overcome their trembling for the financial future of the country.

During a few minutes at a recent session of the senate, Democrats and Republicans, New Dealers and old dealers, spenders and non-spenders—all affecting to be dead against increasing taxes to meet increasing expenses—joined hands instead in the simple procedure of increasing the debt. Without so much as the formality of a rollcall more than 10 per cent—$338,000,000 in agricultural subsidies—was added to the ensuing year's anticipated deficit.

Any member with the timidity to suggest that the subsidies should be met with taxes would, more than likely, have been howled down as an enemy of the farmers. This, of course, would have been entirely beside the point. It is all too clear that the officeholder who fears the political kick-back from increased taxes to pay subsidies seemingly has nothing to fear from the simpler, painless method of increasing the debt to pay them. Nobody is faced with the necessity of paying the debt right now. Everybody would have to pay additional taxes immediately. So why worry?

It is this very postponing of the inevitable, this centering only on the present, this lack of interest in what's to come in the indefinite future, wherein the danger lies. Nobody, of course, will seriously contend it is about to produce immediate national bankruptcy. If it was the people, without doubt, would demand that a stop be put to it, that the budget be balanced either by raising taxes to meet appropriations or reducing expenditures to meet taxes.

The guileless contention that after all "we owe the debt to ourselves" should not be taken seriously either by the people or by congress. As a contribution to a solution of the nation's financial problem, it is utterly worthless. It seems to mean since "we owe it to ourselves" we needn't pay it. Such a thought, given serious consideration, could produce a national financial crisis.

As long as the people take the mounting national debt so lightly, as something always to be attended to in the indefinite future, the politicians may be expected also to regard it in a similar light.

To Breed Cannon Fodder

A recent news report from Wattenscheid, Germany, provides one of the most illuminating spotlights upon the cold bestiality of the Nazi viewpoint toward the citizens of the state.

That report told how the mayor of Wattenscheid has offered 500 marks ($200) to every unmarried woman, 29 years or older, who gives birth to an illegitimate child. Once born, the child assumes responsibility and agrees to provide for the child until it reaches maturity.

The only provisions are that the women must be 29 years old, or more, and that they must inform the authorities they intend to become mothers, before pregnancy occurs. This latter condition is intended to insure healthy fathers, "racially sound," according to the peculiar Nazi formula.

The significance of the report is emphasized by the fact the plan has been enthusiastically approved by "Das Schwarze Korps," organ of Hitler's storm troops, which adds the hope the system will spread throughout Germany.

The horrors implicit in such a plan are too evident to need discussion. It is nothing more nor less than a scheme to produce more "cannon fodder," for Germany's armies of the future, human automatons raised by the state for no other purpose than to march in the goose-stepping ranks of flesh and blood sacrifices to the Minotaur of War.

Imagine what kind of training the state would give to such fatherless atoms of humanity! Training centered upon one objective, to create blindly obedient puppets to shoulder rifles, to kill and to be killed. Fatherless human robots, moulded by hatred-inspired Nazis.

It is but a step to state operated institutions where babies shall be produced like cattle for the market place of Mars.

Freezing the patient is a new strategy in the war on disease. When feeling below par, you crawl into the icebox with the other left-overs.

If the proposed picnic is thrown for George

VI and Elizabeth at Krum Elbow, it is supposed only queen ants will be allowed in the layer cake.

Just having the millinery look like something would be something.

Idle Money?

According to figures given before the federal monopoly committee by Dr. Donald H. Davenport, of the Harvard School of Business Administration, the habit of thrift is still a strong factor in the lives of average Americans.

Dr. Davenport stated that savings of individual citizens in this country today total $69,000,000,000. This vast sum includes savings bank deposits, building and loan association accounts, life insurance cash values and credits in old-age retirement funds or pension systems.

The total is 50 per cent greater than the national debt, equal to the entire national income for an average year and constitutes an average of $530 for each man, woman and child.

Despite the theorists who have, of recent years, preached the doctrine of spending, the habit of thrift is too ingrained in the individual consciousness to induce the average man or woman to forego the accumulation of a nest egg against financial reverses in the future.

At the same time the wonder arises whether some proportion of these accumulated savings do not represent the "idle capital" against which modern politicians so frequently complain. The law strictly circumscribes the types of investment open to life insurance companies, building and loan associations, etc. Is it not, therefore, reasonable to assume that the alleged reluctance of capital to enter speculative enterprise is due to these wise provisions of law, combined with the thrifty tendencies of the average citizen?

Regardless of the theorizing of economists, however, it remains a matter for national self-congratulation that Americans still, as a whole, are a thrifty people and that, given opportunity, they still seek the means to guarantee personal independence regardless of what the future may bring.

That is the American way.

"Teeth" for Flyers

Many aviators, after completing long trips at high altitude, find themselves temporarily deafened or annoyed by crackling, hissing or roaring sounds in the ears. Similar sensations are said to be experienced by army and navy pilots at the conclusion of high-speed diving tactics. The condition, if not corrected, according to aviation authorities, results in mild vertigo and danger of accident.

These peculiar sensations have long been traced to a functional failure of the passages connecting the ear and throat—the eustachian tubes. These passages serve to equalize ear pressures with changing altitudes, a function of great importance to aviation where such changes are every-day occurrences.

As far back as three years ago it was reported to naval authorities by specialists that this form of ear trouble was prevalent among the older, more experienced flyers. It was attributed to normal wear or loss of teeth, resulting in a closer shutting of the jaws than was intended by nature. This had the effect of partially closing the eustachian tubes, followed by mild temporary dizziness at higher altitudes.

No alarm was felt, however, on the part of the flyers or the flying public. The defect was promptly remedied by inlays or other methods of "raising the bite" to make jaws fit as originally intended by nature.

It was not to be expected, however, that aviation would be content with the first remedy. It is always seeking improvements. Following recent examinations of 550 flyers it was announced by Lieutenant Raymond A. Lowry, of the naval dental corps, that 83 airmen had improper jaw fittings needing correction. His remedy was simple. No permanent dental work was required. Removable dental "splints" of form-fitting vulcanite were provided to hold the abnormal jaws in the desired position.

Like the individual with "store teeth" the aviator must always have his set with him—when needed. But he may carry it in his pocket, slipping it in place as he takes off and slipping it out, if he so desires, as he lands.

Editorial of the Day

THE REPUBLIC CASE

(From The Asheville Citizen)

Willful damage to a person's property has been considered from time immemorial a criminal act. By the same token, is the destruction of property during a strike grounds for the collection of damages through a lawsuit?

The Republic Steel Corporation's $7,500,000 suit against the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee (CIO) for damages resulting from the 1937 strike in "little steel" raises this question anew. Historically, from the viewpoint of the plaintiff there is ample precedent not only to sue but to collect as well.

The corporation's suit is based upon alleged violation of the Clayton anti-trust law which, oddly enough, was enacted largely with the support of labor unions who believed its passage would exempt unions from the penalizing provisions of the Sherman act, adopted in 1890.

To some persons, the language of the Clayton act, passed in 1914, seems clearly to except labor unions: "the labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce. Nothing contained in the anti-trust laws shall be construed to forbid the existence and operation of labor organizations . . . or to forbid or restrain individual members of such organizations from lawfully carrying out the legitimate objects thereof . . ."

Thus precedent and court experience seem to support Republic's contention. However, one fact remains to be considered. If, under the terms of the suit filed in Cleveland, the jury were to award the company the damages it asks, the fine would obviously destroy the union and provide an entering wedge for the crippling of the whole labor movement in the United States. The steel workers were clearly guilty of lawless and anti-social acts in many stages of the "little steel" dispute. They should, therefore, be made to suffer the penalty in precise ratio to the damage they caused. Yet, if such an excessive penalty as the Republic Steel Corporation demands holds, it may easily lend encouragement to those who could incite the self-destruction of unions in future strikes where the participants might have a perfectly legal and peaceful intent.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

MURPHY BUILD-UP WASHINGTON, May 28.—The same New Dealers who hope that the President will run again have also made their tentative choice for second place on their dream ticket. Attorney General Frank Murphy, New Dealishly nicknamed "Frank the Just," is the man. The build-up for him is already in progress, and is being ardently co-operated in by the attorney general himself.

Such political plans may seem chimerical, but they are at least entertaining and worth recording, particularly as the President himself has shown interest in one aspect of them. This is the idea that Murphy will be particularly useful as a sort of anti-Dewey, another brandisher of the gleaming sword of justice, fit to compete with the youthful racket-buster of New York county. Thus far, the President has had no truck with the New Dealers' dream ticket, but he has held at least one caller, with considerable relish, that before Frank Murphy got through, Tom Dewey's achievements would begin to look like pretty small potatoes.

The President's prediction was made about the time Tom Pendergast pleaded guilty, and included the intimation that six more great and powerful men were slated for the fate of the unlucky Kansas City satrap. Meanwhile, Frank Murphy is playing his allotted role both zealously and well. Airplanes carry him back and forth across the country, searching for entrenched sin in the company of the well-publicized J. Edgar Hoover. Newsreels catch him arriving at this city or that, hot on the trail of malefactors. His press conferences hear him proclaim the unshakable rigor of his enforcement of the law. And everywhere the wicked tremble.

EX-LAME DUCK It cannot be denied that, if the New Dealers had carte blanche (which they so very obviously do not) in picking the 1940 slate, Murphy would be a pretty good choice for second man. His build-up as an anti-Dewey may be a little funny, as such build-ups usually are, but it is more than likely to be effective in the end. He is also a midwesterner, an earnest New Dealer, and a member of the Roman Catholic church. This last qualification is thought by some to be particularly important, since it is desired to deny recognition to another Roman Catholic, Postmaster General James A. Farley, and since it is hoped that, being a Roman Catholic, Murphy will take the curse of extreme radicalism off the New Deal.

Murphy still carries some of the curse of the sit-down strikes, but he has come a long way since he was imported from Michigan last January. Then he wore the aspect of a very lame lame duck, about to be paid off for his services to the White House.

Since then, he has carried out an intelligent and much-needed reorganization of the Justice Department. He has launched a campaign to drive the worst of the numerous shabby political judges from the bench. He has done his best to improve the system of judicial appointments, and has sent several really good federal district attorneys into the field. While most of the credit for the Pendergast case should go to the Treasury, he has done an admirable job in other big cases. And he has important and spectacular plans afoot, such as prosecutions of illegal activities of American Nazis and Communists.

RESULTS AND CLAIMS Indeed, Murphy's most serious discernible fault is a habit of protesting too much. His mother is said to have intended him for the priesthood, which perhaps explains his ultra-pious manner. But even the most pious members of the clergy generally let others find out how many souls they have snatched from the burning, without proclaiming the numbers themselves. Murphy, on the other hand, has a way of telling his dinner companions that purity is his program. Little stories circulate in Washington of how he informed the lady that he had "saved more lives by his management of the sit-down strikes than were lost in the Civil War," and that lady that his department would be "clean as a whistle."

This protesting too much is the defect of a curiously complex, and, one suspects, joyless character. And after all, if the performance lives up to the protest, in most cases, the public should be grateful for the results without cavilling at the manner of their announcement.

It remains to be seen whether Murphy will maintain his performance at the same level. Probably he can, for he has the ability, notably by his determination. Before long he will be tested, notably by a political judicial appointment, and by his already been cheated of the name to watch for on the nomination lists is that of Charles Alvin Jones, last year's anti-Guffey nominee for governor of Pennsylvania, by whose conciliation Guffey hopes to bring together his shattered Pennsylvania machine.

He Was Scotch.

He was a young Scotchman. Had served with the Black Watch all through the war. Been gassed at Ypres and bore the scars of shrapnel all over his body. Now he was an American, successful in business. I think it was Pittsburgh where he lived. A bachelor and a bawler.

It was 1925. On board the Cunarder Franconia, traveling west. He was my cabin companion. And we'd walk the deck together and talk, and of an evening, pay tribute to an important product of the rail, telling each other how they'd appreciated the companion-ship all the way over and promising, some day, to write to each other and, perhaps, meet again.

And I said to the Scotchman, "What's the first thing you plan to do ashore?"

And he replied, "I'm going to send that Irishman one that he'll never forget. I've got my eye on him and as soon as he's ashore, he's going to get one punch. And he'll wake up in some hospital wondering what hit him."

"Yes," said I, "and perhaps it'll be a Scotch girl who'll be nursing him. Didn't you tell me that?"

The Scotchman said nothing.

"And besides," I added, "this is New York. With an Irish cop on almost every corner. Better think twice."

The Scotchman sighed. "Mebbe you're right," he said. "Mebbe I'd better invite him to Pittsburgh first."

And that, in so far as I could know, was the end of the story.

GOOD MORNING

BEWARE!

Talking with a brain specialist the other night at one of our Atlanta hospitals, I asked him about a mutual friend whom he was attending in what later proved a fatal illness. I asked the physician what he thought of the man's chances to recover.

"He settled that himself," replied the specialist, "too much liquor."

That very evening I was reading a most interesting magazine in which I found, in different articles, the following statements:

"Abraham Lincoln said that the liquor business has many defenders, but no defense."

"The National Broadcasting Company will henceforth not accept on its networks any advertising for beer or light wines, and this new regulation is an extension of the company's ban against liquor advertising."

"A young woman drinks, she cannot reasonably complain if the man she marries comes home drunk and drives her into the street."

Americans NEW YORK, May 28.—It is my belief that most Americans

First of All 28.—It is my belief that most Americans

Jews not only have no interest in Palestine but resent the insinuation inherent in the case that they desire some other homeland than the United States. The agitation of the problem in this country, including representations to the American State Department on behalf of the Palestine community by certain prominent Jews who call themselves leaders, put other American Jews in a false position, and gives undeserved aid and comfort to a band of Hitlerized American terrorists who allege that all Jews withhold devotion to the land of their birth. Men and women who were born in this country and who are utterly loyal to their native land thus are made to suffer suspicion and other penalties for sentiments of which they are innocent.

Regardless of the legal, political and diplomatic facts of the problem, the American people will not sympathize with an effort to create a homeland for people who are already citizens of other countries, including this one.

American Methodists, Baptists and Catholics are content with this as the homeland and, in a simple, direct way, will ask themselves why American Jews should not only want another but call on other nations to guarantee and protect it, instead of fighting out their own problems.

Few Are Active The fact is that comparatively few American Jews are active in this agitation, the vast majority being either indifferent to the movement or opposed to it on the ground that it suggests some weakness or division in their own love of the United States.

The so-called Jewish homeland is an artificial creation attempted by the British agreed to in violation of another bargain at a time when they would have promised anybody anything to save their lives.

It hasn't worked up to now, and the British are in a terrible sweat about a county court shyster trying to prove that they promised less than they did. But that is their problem, and the problem of the Arabs and some Jews, but not the problem of the American Jews, except those who voluntarily and formally declare themselves in on it.

This Is Homeland If those concerned can work it out, that the American people will not commission their government to take any responsibility for the fulfillment of a British promise or the protection of any other homeland than this one, the American people, the mysterious and unexplored possibilities of the Monroe Doctrine.

This document commits us to the job of protecting much British and French property on this side of the water, and protecting certain South American countries from their own folly, should they decide to throw in with a new Spanish Fascist empire under General Franco.

The hypnosis of the Nazis is popularly detested and openly rebuked here, but it is just as reasonable to ask the American nation to help the Germans recapture Danzig as it is for certain Jews of American nationality to press the government or people for any official aid for this so-called homeland.

Those Jews who do cherish the idea and the hope of its fulfillment, and want to give their ability and money for it, have a legal right to do so. But there should be some means by which the American people, who regard this as his homeland, and resents any suggestion that he wants another, could disassociate himself from the propaganda.

the greatest trap that life has set for the feet of genius."

"If the drinking of intoxicating liquors is helpful to human beings, every pulpit ought to support it, every church ought to be a fountain of every Christian ought to do what he can to get the drinking of intoxicating liquors to become unanimous and continuous. If you can think of anything good you can say for the liquor traffic, let's have it."

The next morning a young man came to my study, asking to see me privately. I closed the door. He told me a story filled with tragedy. Before I could speak, he said: "And every bit of this whole story of defeat and sorrow is due to liquor. I have lost my health; I have wasted a fortune; I have sent my mother to a premature grave. And all because I thought I could fool with liquor and get away with it. If anybody asks you what it will do to a fellow, tell them to look at me."

All of which seems to add up to this, that sensible young people will surely beware of the warnings everywhere affirmed regarding liquor. Ask your doctor, ask your banker, ask your lawyer, ask your teacher, ask your employer, ask your father, ask your mother, what they think about liquor.

"TAKE ME OUT TO THE BALL GAME" Of all the games I suppose baseball is the finest. Most games in which there is real competition involving attack and defense are excellent games. But baseball has something the others lack.

It is even better than a great play because it can give you in a brief two hours of play more dramatic moments, more appearances of the hero and the villain, more tragedy, more achieving of the ultimate than any play could offer in five acts.

It is a spectator game, yet it brings the spectator nearer to participation than any other sport. This, of course, applies only if you like baseball. There are a few people who don't, but that probably is because they do not attend enough games to learn the mechanics of it, to learn the "inside" of it, to appreciate the skill and finesse of its swift action.

It is the only game in which one of the actors may be, for almost the entire duration of the play, the great triumphant hero and become in the last inning a beaten, abject creature at whom the crowd shouts and boos and yells "take him out."

In no other game is there this great emotional play, and in no other game is there as much skill. A really good baseball team, even in the minor leagues, will give you more skilled entertainment for 50 or 75 cents than you can buy anywhere else for the price.

THE VITAL STATISTICS Consider for a moment the batter, which he stands and the pitcher's box is but a little more than 60 feet. A fast ball requires but a very brief part of a second to reach the plate. It is available for hitting for a distance of not more than three feet during that precipitate flight of slightly more than 60 feet. It boils down to the fact that the man at the plate, with his bat poised, has something like two one-hundredths of a second in which to size up the ball and decide whether he shall swing.

There come at him all sorts of balls. There will be a swift curve which breaks in toward his hands, there will be another which seems to come directly at his body and then slants away from him wide of the plate, there will be another which comes burning down the middle, as they call it, only to "sail" upward or break downward. The batter has but the merest part of a second in which he shall decide what he shall do. He keeps that bat moving slightly to and fro as he waits not because of any desire to make the ball believe he intends to hit, nor because of any nervousness, but merely because the bat must be ready. He always must swing slightly ahead of the ball if he is to meet it fairly. There is required in batting perhaps more expert timing of mind and muscle than is required by any other single act in any other sport.

The act of hitting a golf ball requires great timing, but the golf ball sits still on its tee and is not curving in or out or sailing upward or breaking downward.

AND WHEN HE HITS IT Consider now the infield. A ball sharply hit reaches the infield in less than a second. It may be a white streak going off to his right or left, it may be a fast, wicked grounder coming at him in sharp, angry hops. He must do two essential things. He must catch the ball and throw it one and the same motion. His body must synchronize so that the catching of the ball becomes a smooth part of the throwing of the ball.

The batter, if he is right handed, should be able to run the 90 feet to first base in about three to four seconds. The left handed batter makes it in a little less because of his advantage. The batter has but to run, the infielder has to catch the ball and throw it and beat the runner to first with the ball.

Consider the pitcher. He throws at a triangular plate which once upon a time was round like a dinner plate and thereby got its name. It is composed of rubber now and is not large. It is a matter of a few inches. He must pitch to that plate, throwing curves, slow ones, and fast ones, taking his strategy from the catcher who signals with finger signals. It is almost always a duel of guessing between the pitcher and the catcher.

Consider the outfield. The really great outfielder starts running at the crack of the bat, knowing by some sort of instinct where the ball will be.

It is a great show of a succession of little dramas in which runners are trying to beat a ball in flight and in which heroes are made and broken, in which the buffoon becomes the hero, in which the Goliath is broken by baseball Davids, in which Goliath often tramples David.

It has a very real drama, too, of speed and motion, and if you do not like baseball, then I am very sorry for you. You haven't lived until you have munched peanuts, consumed cold soft drinks, pop corn, and otherwise insulted your digestion. Nor have you lived until you have arisen in your rage and shouted, "Kill him!"

"Kill the umpire!"

Had you noticed it? Even the trouble in Europe slowed down to a walk when the baseball season got underway.

The Cadet Overcomes His Fear of Officers by Growing Up To Be General

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Mrs. Roosevelt encourages the millions who live in fear by telling how timid and fearful she was as a child and young woman, and how she acquired confidence and poise.

It is true that anybody can reasonably hope to rid himself of any particular fear, or outgrow the habit of timidity, but it isn't probable that anybody can outgrow fear itself or the capacity for fear. Certainly it has never been proved.

Apparently all animals, even the largest and most ferocious, are born with a capacity for fear. It is a part of their defensive equipment. Man's one advantage is the ability to convince himself by the reason alone that fear is unjustified.

Experience shows that fearful people can overcome their handicap in a number of ways.

They can believe in a loving Father who watches over them in life and makes death itself a way to happiness; they can develop a philosophy that makes all things seem unimportant, and free themselves of anxiety simply by not caring; they can become so listless and ornery that nothing matters; they can acquire the familiarity that breeds contempt; or they can, without removing the cause of fear, make it relatively trivial by climbing above it.

It may be that all people are by nature equally fearful. That is, all may be equally frightened when they have, or think they have, equal reason to be afraid.

A small boy is afraid when a strange man playfully growls at him; for the man is three times his height. His father laughs at him, but would the father feel wholly at ease if an 18-foot stranger growled at him?

The most fearful things are the strange and unfamiliar. Dogs, horses, cattle, a storm at sea, a ride in an airplane—all these familiar things may frighten people not accustomed to them; while other people, no braver by nature, live without fear among the reptiles of the swamp or within the shadow of an active volcano. Use makes dreadful things seem ordinary.

People don't overcome the fear of such dangerous things. They merely forget it. And the way to be rid of such a fear is simply to live with it until the mind regards it as something commonplace and is no longer impressed by it.

Mrs. Roosevelt's kind of fear is a matter of relative size, like the small boy's fear of the man. She might have outgrown every one, without

Remedy for State Farm Ills Prescribed by Dr. Stuckey

Four-Fold Diagnosis, Treatment Outlined by Director of Georgia Experiment Station; Diversified Production, Home Processing, Large-Scale Cultivation Urged.

By ROMNEY WHEELER.
EXPERIMENT, Ga., May 28.—(AP)—What's wrong with ailing southern agriculture? Dr. Henry F. Stuckey, director of the Georgia Experiment Station, put a figurative stethoscope to the chest of the patient today and offered a four-fold diagnosis and a prescription for treatment.

First, he said, is the problem of eroded and worn-out soil, damaged by generations of one-crop cotton or corn production.

Second, the need for diversified production, to provide adequate income for a market which no longer gives profitable return on cotton operations.

Third, necessity of evolving home or community processing, to permit sale of finished agricultural products rather than bulk raw material.

Fourth, economic pressure which is displacing the small farmer and forcing adoption of large-scale cultivation.

Urges Use of Cover Crops.

For the problem of soil depletion, he suggested use of cover crops such as vetch, crimson clover and the like, to rebuild the fertility. Also terracing, to prevent further erosion, and "reasonable" fertilization when crops are planted.

"Why," he exclaimed, "there are thousands of acres in production year in and year out, which haven't had a spoonful of fertilizer in 10 years or more. And yet the farmer expects to make a living."

Cotton, he believes, has its place, but not to exclusion of other money crops adaptable to the south. Diversification with improved varieties of wheat, oats, peanuts, soybeans, grapes, peppers and other produce, as well as timber and livestock, would yield increased and more steady income.

Dr. Stuckey also is a champion of greater home processing. As an example, he cited production of muscadine grapes.

"These grapes," he explained, "bring about $1 a bushel on the market. Yet if they are pressed, a bushel would yield four gallons of juice which would be valued at $1 a gallon, or four times the income from the original product. You can see what I mean, then, when I say that home or community processing is profitable when it helps bring the farm product a step nearer the final consumer."

With migration of southern farm labor to industrial centers, successful farming by old methods has been increasingly difficult, Dr. Stuckey contends. He sees a trend toward gradual elimination of the small farmer and substitution of large acreage, cultivated with aid of machinery.

Large Farms Needed.

"Our small farms, even with negro labor, cannot compete successfully with large-scale enterprises in the middle west. In 1930, for instance, the census showed Georgia with a farm population of 1,418,514 on 22,079,000 acres. In Iowa, the same year, 977,006 persons on farms were obtaining their living from 34,019,000 acres. That averaged 34.8 acres per person, compared to 16.9 in Georgia. The average Georgia farm was 88.4 acres, as against 158.3 acres in Iowa."

"But we are coming to expanded farms," he added. "In 1935, Georgia's average farm had increased to slightly more than 101 acres. I have no doubt the 1940 census will show another corresponding increase."

Could any able-bodied man

JOHN M. ANGLIN, 66, DIES IN RICHLAND

Publisher of Stewart Webster Journal Found Dead in Yard.

RICHLAND, Ga., May 28.—John M. Anglin Sr., 66, editor and publisher of the Stewart Webster Journal, was found dead in his yard at Lumpkin yesterday by a negro servant. He had been suffering of heart disease for two or three years.

His family left Friday afternoon for Washington, D. C., to attend the funeral of William Henry Anglin, a brother of Mr. Anglin, and Mr. Anglin not being able to withstand the long ride to Washington, remained at home.

No arrangements have been made for funeral but his body is being held at the Davis Funeral Home in Richland awaiting the arrival of the family from Washington today.

Mr. Anglin was reared in Schley county near Elaville, and spent his early life in Schley and Lumpkin counties. He was employed with the American Times Recorder several years when the paper was owned and edited by Mrs. Myrick. About 25 years ago he left America to take over the management of the Lumpkin Independent. In 1925 he purchased the Richland News from M. B. Brown and consolidated the Lumpkin Independent and the Richland News into the Stewart-Webster Journal, which he has owned and operated since that time. He is survived by his wife and four sons.

He was assisted in the newspaper work by two sons, John M. Anglin Jr. and Adrian Anglin. Two other sons, Byron C. Anglin and Leonard Anglin, are attending Vanderbilt University at Nashville, Tenn.

make a profit at farming, if he follows scientific practices? "Well," replied the doctor with a wag of his head, "it takes a lot of cutting and saving and hard work, and even then the outcome is unpredictable. The average southern farmer has an extremely low cash income at best. Taxes and other absolutely necessary expenses cut this still lower. That's why he has found it difficult to adopt these measures which would help solve the south's agricultural problems."

The Pulse Of the People

AUTHOR EXPLAINS VIEWS ON RELIGION

Editor, Constitution: My attention has been called to some excerpts taken from an article of mine in the Christian Century and printed in your paper in the column entitled "Good Morning," by Rev. Louie Newton. My article was an exposition of my rejection of liberalism in both religion and politics. Rev. Newton quoted sections of my article faithfully, but the excerpts, taken alone, might make it appear that I had become a convert to religious conservatism as it is usually understood. I am anxious to have it known that I do not accept the fundamentalist version of Christianity in any sense and that if I had to choose between fundamentalism and liberalism I would still choose liberalism as nearer to the truth. I hope, therefore, you will allow me to call attention to several statements in my article which were not quoted and which I regard as important. For the sake of brevity I will merely quote a few passages without giving the whole context.

"Liberal Christianity made a genuine contribution to true Christianity by appropriating some of the achievements of this (liberal) culture. Through some of these appropriations liberal Christianity purified Christian theology of some of its grievous historical errors—Religion is constitutionally indifferent to the problems of secondary causation. This indifference becomes a sin when theology is made into a bad religion, and the sense of ultimate meaning and creation is allowed to obscure the problem of natural causation."

In other words, I have no sympathy with orthodox Christianity's fight against science, its opposition to the doctrine of evolution for instance.

On the social issue I wrote: "The problem of achieving economic justice is obviously more difficult than liberalism had imagined. The prerequisite of economic justice is a tolerable equilibrium of economic power, which in a technical age means the socialization of property. The excessive moralism of liberalism makes it impossible to see either the necessity of this end nor the rigorous means which will be required to achieve it. Liberalism seems unable to move toward the economic democracy which is required to maintain its political democracy."

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 28.—(AP)—A 2 per cent general sales tax—officially called a gross receipts tax—moved to the legislative front today as the most-discussed method of overcoming a threatened deficit of $12,000,000 in Florida's finances.

They Start Ball Rolling for Kiddie Revue

Samuel Rothberg, Gene Gunby and little Glenn Delk form a committee of three to start the ball rolling for the eleventh annual Kiddie Revue at Loew's the week of June 9. It will be a benefit for the Scottish Rite Milk Fund and will help many like Gene here back to health.

150 Youngsters Will Participate In Eleventh Annual Kiddie Revue

Production at Loew's Theater Here Week of June Ninth Will Benefit Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children.

The eleventh annual Kiddie Revue will come to Loew's Grand theater the week of June 9, James Setz, chairman, announced.

About this time every year for the past decade there has been a great to-do in the talent schools as tots and teens and all the in-betweens are tried out for the big event in Atlanta's young show-life. The past week has been no exception. Manager Eddie Pentecost, of Loew's; Jack Rand, director of the revue, and members of the committee have auditioned hundreds of youngsters, and listened patiently to their parental pleas. This year the revue will consist of 48 numbers in which some 150 children will take part, and all 48 scenes will be presented in the allotted one hour.

The Kiddie Revue is one of the many ingenious ways in which the thousands of dollars needed every year to keep the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children flourishing. This year's committee, which includes Julian Boehm, Samuel Rothberg, Eugene Gunby, Charles Held and the Rev. Ted Morrison, fully expects that this year's Milk Fund will break all previous records.

Some 60 little patients in the hospital will have secure future because 150 of their fellow dance and sing in their behalf.

U. S. MEMORIAL DAY TO BE MARKED HERE

Fort McPherson Will Hold Rites Tomorrow.

National Memorial Day will be observed tomorrow as a holiday in Atlanta by offices of the federal government, and with appropriate ceremonies at Fort McPherson.

The post office will remain open until noon. Two mail deliveries will be made in the business section, and none in the residential districts.

The garrison flag at Fort McPherson will fly at half-staff from reveille until mid-day, when the traditional salute in honor of America's soldier dead will be fired, and the flag hoisted to full staff.

Banks, the Atlanta Clearing House Association reported, business houses and others will observe the day as usual.

JAMES L. KEY DIES IN HIS 72D YEAR

W. Monroe Butler, of Atlanta; two sisters, Mrs. C. A. McDaniel and Miss Lela Key, of Norcross; and a brother, the Rev. G. Oscar Key, of McKinney, Texas.

Mr. Key retired as mayor January 1, 1937, when he was succeeded by Hartsfield.

Since that time, the former mayor had lived in retirement, partly in Atlanta and partly in Norcross with a sister. His health had not been good for a number of years before he left office.

He had been president of the Georgia Mayors' Association, which he helped organize, and which his untimely death and determination kept alive.

Mr. Key was born in DeKalb county July 27, 1867, on the site of the tract which is now used as the city stockade. He was the son of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Key. He received his A.B. degree from Emory College, then located at Oxford, Ga., in 1888, he married the late Miss Ella Tillman, of Quitman, Ga., on June 20, 1906. He was admitted to the bar in Georgia in 1889.

He served as councilman from the sixth ward in 1902-03, marking the beginning of a distinguished record of public life. In 1906, he became alderman from the sixth ward and served until 1909. On November 8, 1911, he became a member of the Atlanta board of education representing the fourth ward, and held that post until November 19, 1918, when he resigned after being elected mayor of Atlanta.

Mayor in 1919.

He served as mayor the first time for two terms of two years each, beginning in 1919 and continuing until January, 1925. In 1931 he was elected as mayor for a four-year term, and then succeeded himself for another two-year term.

James G. Woodward was the only other Floridian who served as long as eight years as mayor of Atlanta. He was one of those who sponsored the election of Willis A. Sutton, as superintendent of schools, and numbered among his proteges were many city officials.

During his first four years as mayor, he launched a determined fight against power interests. He was not satisfied with the quietude of an office, and always was active in precipitating issues. Keen and active, he felt the public pulse, he kept an attentive ear to the ground. His opponents admired his brilliant attacks, and his friends gloried in his achievements, his successes, his ability to turn what seemed to be certain defeat into victory.

When the depression struck Atlanta Key sought to retrench, to force the city government to live within its income. He was so successful in his drive that the city would attempt to abridge the rights of other leading cities of the United States tottered and fell.

Attacked Prohibition.

Soon after his election in 1931, he made a visit to France, and while ill in a Parisian hospital, he branded the prohibition system as a failure, to allow labor to dictate council and majority actions and urged by the necessity to curtail wages in city contracts, labor leaders joined prohibitionists and formed a coalition to make the recall petition effort a success.

Early in 1932, the petition was signed by the required number of voters, and the election was called. In the interim, Grace Methodist church, where Key had taught a Sunday school class for many years, demanded that the mayor refrain from mentioning repeal of prohibition laws in the church, but he declined to acquiesce. He said he would resign as a teacher, but would give up his right to discuss anything for the "moral uplift of the community before his class." His resignation was accepted, and he, with a large number of his class, moved to a downtown theater. It was the largest single class in Atlanta, and was non-denominational.

In the recall, Key beat the labor-prohibition combine by more than 5,000 votes and retained his office.

GEORGIANS URGED TO BOOST PEACHES

Arnall Says Citizens Must Take Lead, Create Demand for State Product.

MACON, Ga., May 28.—(AP)—Charging peach production "is the neglected step-child of Georgia," Attorney General Ellis Arnall urged Georgians today to "take the lead and create the demand by advertising our own product."

In a radio address in connection with opening of the peach season, Arnall declared:

"Hotels and restaurants in Georgia, the birthplace of the American peach industry, have found the demand for fresh Georgia peaches so small that they could handle at a profit only the canned variety from California."

Must Create Demand.

"If the owner of a restaurant takes his meals at a rival establishment across the street, then the customers all begin to suspect that better meals are served across the way. If the people of Georgia fail to create a demand for their own product, can they complain that more enterprising states have encroached upon their markets?"

"The problem, then, is to make our markets not only peach-conscious but Georgia peach-conscious. The people of Georgia who have so long taken the peach for granted, must assume the lead. The demand will never be created until Georgia people discover the Georgia peach."

Calling attention to successful campaigns by Iowa and Maine to popularize their corn and potatoes, respectively, Arnall continued:

Co-operation Needed.

"The success of those campaigns is written in the history of the nationwide attention that was turned toward Maine and Iowa. These results can be measured in terms of new markets for all of the state's products and larger incomes for its citizens. But unless we, as Georgians, take the lead and create the demand by advertising our own product, we can expect no one else to do it for us."

Arnall praised the 1938 campaign to advertise the Georgia peach at home as a step "in the right direction," and observed that 1940 auto license tags would "spread the word that Georgia is proud of her peaches."

"But," he added, "if the program is to be successful, it must have the co-operation of every citizen in the state."

DAVIS FITZGERALD TO HEAD H-Y CLUBS

Davis Fitzgerald, of Boys High school, was elected president of the Atlanta Federation of H-Y Clubs at the recent dinner-meeting.

Other officers chosen were Arthur Montgomery, of North Fulton High school, vice president; Harry Woolley, of Druid Hills, secretary, and Ray White, of West Fulton, treasurer.

The 1930 primary, he won in a five-cornered field. He predicted his campaign on a clean-up in municipal affairs. That was the first race after the graft probe of city hall by Fulton county, and Key was bitter in his attacks on all those who were in office at the time, or who were in any way connected with the old regime. He pleaded with Atlantans to clean house, and most of the incumbents were swept from office.

At that time, Key had the active support of labor and the school elements. Both of these, however, became estranged in later years, but new alliances were formed, new friends entered the picture, and Key was re-elected mayor in 1935.

In the 1935 primary campaign, Key launched an attack on school operations. He was irked by the fact that while other departments of the city government were forced to economize, because of reduced revenues, the school department succeeded in having the Georgia legislature raise the percentage of city receipts going to schools from 26 to 30.

Beat Two Rivals.

He was nominated over two candidates and without a runoff, despite a determined effort of leaders of the school teachers and administration heads to defeat him.

He believed that there were too many wards in Atlanta and that city council was too large for an efficient and economical government. Championing a reduction in wards and in the membership of council, the people voted to reduce the wards. Political influences, however, balked the approval of the plan by the Georgia legislature until the 1935 session. As a result, the 13 Atlanta wards were reduced to six and council's membership of 27 members to 18 in January of 1937.

Boomed for Governor.

Several times he was boomed for the gubernatorial nomination. As the aftermath of his attack on prohibition laws, both state and national, Key was indorsed for the vice presidency at a mammoth mass meeting held at Lakeland in 1931. He never took it seriously, however, but hundreds of Georgians insisted that he was a statesman and urged him to seek higher office.

He was a personal friend of President Roosevelt, and was entertained at the Little White House at Warm Springs several times. He criticized the then Governor Talmadge, Huey Long and others who attacked the Roosevelt regime.

GEORGIA ALUMNI GROUP TO ELECT ON JUNE 12

ATHENS, Ga., May 28.—(AP)—Two well-known Georgians, O. W. Franklin, of Valdosta, and Hutton Lovejoy, of LaGrange, have been nominated to succeed James M. Hull, of Augusta, as president of the University of Georgia Alumni Society.

Members of the society will select one of the two on "Alumni Day," June 12.

Two new members of the board of managers of the association will be chosen also, with three candidates on the list. They are Anne W. Brumby of Athens; Mary R. Gray and William Perrin Nicolson, both of Athens.

NAVY PREPARED, DECLARES LEAHY

never been a higher state of efficiency in the fleet than at the present time, he asserted.

Soon to become Governor of Puerto Rico, which under army and navy plans will be a Caribbean Gibraltar, Leahy said naval bases were needed in both the Atlantic and Pacific. He noted that congress already has appropriated for a dozen considered most urgently needed.

Navy Must Be Strong.

Stressing the navy's role in national defense strategy, the admiral said that if the nation was to avoid the complete mobilization of war power found now "in at least three nations," it was "essential that your navy be of sufficient strength and in such a state of readiness as to keep any possible enemy at a distance from our homeland, at least until such time as we are ready to receive him."

"When that time arrives," he added, "the enemy will not come. So long as the navy is undefeated, the present modest mobilization plan of the army will be sufficient to protect our shores, and so long as the navy is interposed between us and possible enemies, your homes will be safe."

Filthy Roaches in the Kitchen?

Here's how to get rid of them. First, keep the floor under the sink, refrigerator, stove, etc., free from crumbs and food particles. Second, get a can of Bee Brand Insect Powder. Sprinkle it in all corners, back of and under the refrigerator, stove, etc., and around openings where pipes go through the floor. Blow the powder into the cracks and under wall boards. When roaches scurry out, give them another dose of powder. Third, use Bee Brand Insect Powder really kills roaches, ants and other crawling insects quick—yet it's entirely safe to use around the house. Inset on the powder Bee Brand Insect Powder. It's sold with a guarantee of satisfaction or your money back. Three sizes: 10¢, 25¢, 50¢.

NOTE: You can also kill roaches and ants, as well as flies and mosquitoes, with Bee Brand Insect Spray. Read directions on can.

SWEET FOR A SEASON

By a Ruse, Glada Discovers That J. Q. Adams Is Gern's Agent

By JOSEPH McCORD.

INSTALLMENT XXXVI.

"Bless my soul! If it isn't Miss Lee! My dear lady, I am more than delighted to see you getting about again. My congratulations!"

"Thank you. And please don't bother to put on your coat. I am staying only a minute."

"But of course I will! Here. Let me give you a chair." He seated her with a courtly air. "I suppose this place looks quite familiar to you."

"Yes." Seeing her former office was more of an ordeal than she anticipated. It all came back. That last day here, Gern seated there at the desk. John Quincy's rasping voice recalled her.

"I am afraid, Miss Lee, you are thinking... you must be thinking... that I have treated this whole proposition rather cavalierly, I might say. All unintentional on my part, I assure you. It has seemed impossible to find any one to do the work here since... since your young Mr. Jones left."

"You couldn't induce him to stay?"

"No. That is... he looked after things well enough, but... I think I told you he wouldn't be very dependable. As a matter of fact, Miss Lee, we have about decided... quite decided, in fact... to close out the business here. For the present, I have arranged with Mr. Peters to stay on at a salary. Whatever he can make off the place is his. I intended to see you before I left town. We... that is, I wondered if you would care to take over the property management again on some satisfactory basis. It could be arranged very easily. You might find it interesting while you are recuperating."

"I hardly think so," Glada looked faintly amused. Then she decided on a bold stroke. Mr. Adams' uncertainty with his "It's" and "we's" was all that was needed to confirm growing suspicions that were very near certainties. "Don't you think," she asked, "quietly, 'that the time has come to quit beating about the bush? You needn't keep on posing as the buyer and longer, so far as I am concerned. You see, I know a great deal more about your little plot than you give me credit for. In fact, it isn't necessary to carry it any farther."

"I confess I am mighty glad to hear you say so, Miss Lee!" John Quincy deposited his spectacles on the desk with a force that threatened to break them. "Of course it was my duty to carry out the business end as a trusted agent. I believe I did. But it was not in the agreement that I should be left holding the bag. Except for the financing, the young puppy seems to have washed his hands of the whole affair! Adams added with explosive indignation.

"I thought so," Glada nodded wisely, but she fairly was holding her breath. It was working much better than she had anticipated. "It must have been quite an imposition," she ventured sympathetically.

"Oh, not that exactly, although I am a busy man. You see, we all have pampered Scud since his unspeakable ordeal over on the other side and..."

"Scud?" The question slipped out unheeding.

"Why, yes... Oh, I understand. I believe he called himself Gern while he was here. I was about to say that I would have done anything I could for Scud. And in this case particularly, because I was aware that the judge and your good father were close friends."

"This information was coming almost too rapidly, but Glada managed to retain her composure as she inquired, 'May I ask if you are a relative of... of Scud?'"

"Dear no, I am an attorney, though not in active practice. I think I may say that I am entirely in the confidence of the judge and of Mr. Scudder Jones. I perform many commissions for them. I have for years."

"And I imagine you handle them very capably," Glada told him sweetly. "But I must be starting home."

"And you wouldn't be interested in taking the place back, Miss Lee? I may be violating a confidence, but I am positive that Scud has been hoping you would."

"I am not interested."

"I see. I am sorry, Miss Lee... I have no intention of asking the source of your information about this little matter. But would it be asking too much if I... I think you understand."

"Perfectly, Mr. Adams. I will not mention our conversation to any one."

"I appreciate that," Adams rose with a courtly bow. "May I say you to your car?"

"Please don't bother. I want to talk to Mrs. Peters a moment before I go. It's nice to have seen you again."

"That conversation with Mr. and Mrs. Peters was brief and casual. No embarrassing questions were asked and Glada started for home, laughingly dismissing Irma's solicitous fear that she was "running a temperature." She would come again soon.

"Wait here a minute, Bill," she directed when the car reached the Lee House. "I think my father is going to want you." In another moment she was at the telephone.

"Why, I'm pretty busy, dear, came Ed's surprised voice.

"Please! I'm alone and I need you... badly!"

Quick alarm in the father's voice, now.

"Glada! You're not ill, are you? Do you feel worse?"

"Lots. Bill is starting down to you... badly!"

"She hung up before he could reply.

Ed Lee, bareheaded and breathless, dashed into the living room and glanced about uncertainly. Bill had not been able to give him any satisfaction. He had driven Miss Glada out to the farm and back. She had seemed to be all right.

"In the library," came the convalescent's voice.

Glada was seated in her father's favorite chair, her hands folded in her lap. She did not smile as Ed entered hastily and he fancied that her face was flushed. There was a brightness in her eyes that alarmed him.

"What is it, dear? What is wrong with you? Do you want me to try to get the doctor for you?"

"You're the only one I want to see," she said gravely. "Sit down. I want to talk to you... counsel."

"Hah!" Ed dropped into a chair. There was more to this than met the eye. Something to do with that trip to the farm. "Well?" he offered cautiously.

"Why did you tell me that you didn't know Gern Jones?"

"Ed?" Ed had not expected an attack from that quarter and its directness left him floundering for an instant.

"Yes. I asked you when I hired him. You said you never had heard of that name."

"And I hadn't. His father introduced him as Scud. I'm assuming you have found out who he is."

"I suppose that is what they call a legal technicality, but it's a pretty flimsy one. Was it your idea that he should pose as a down and outer?"

"Pon honor, it wasn't. He wanted to try it. If I had known how things were going to turn out..."

"Your conscience ought to hurt you. I know the background of all this mess, but you might oblige me with some of the details. Maybe I can give you one that you don't know. Gern bought the farm. How's that?"

"News to me. I won't say I did not have my suspicions when your obliging buyer turned out to be an inhabitant of Columbia City. But I was burdened with too much inside information already. Say! Did you see Gern today?"

"Certainly not."

"Then you picked it up from Peters. I didn't know he was in on it."

"You might unburden yourself," Glada suggested, without confirming that last guess.

Her father's account was brief. He told as little as he might, even when confronted with searching questions. He knew very little of the details of Gern's Spanish experience, except that it had left him in a condition from which he had recovered slowly. Too slowly.

"Why do you reckon he wanted to buy the farm—Edo demanded in his turn.

"Oh, he saw my ad. Some sort of silly gesture, I guess."

"Umph. Maybe he knew more than I do about your reasons for selling. It would be rather to the point if I asked you about that. And I don't intend to. I'm staying in the clear from now on. As long as you're right, I'm through worrying."

"Yes? That's what you think, darling. You're not quite through with your plotting. I shall have to see Gern. And you'll fix it up for me."

Ed slowly shook his head.

"Oh, it should be easy. He's probably at Columbia City. If he is, then tell him you must see him at once, important... you can frame it up nicely."

"I'd rather not bring him here, dear. And I'd rather not tell you my reasons."

"You mean on account of mama. I think perhaps you're right. Tell him you'll meet him out at his farm. That should sound logical."

"Me meet him!"

"That's what you'll tell him."

"I see." Ed studied his daughter's face attentively. It still was faintly flushed, her eyes bright. But the brightness in their clear gray depths didn't suggest illness or undue excitement. There was eagerness and... something else. It disturbed Ed Lee, gave him a sudden feeling of apprehension.

"Just a minute, Glada," he began slowly. "This seems to be a time for showing our hands. I suppose I can figure why you'd like to talk to Jones, after this. About the farm. If there's any other reason... and interest in him..."

"Yes, sir?"

"Well, you've hardly forgotten that he never came to see you after you were hurt."

"No. And I haven't forgotten the elaborate defense you made for him."

"That was only on your account. I thought you were worried. After all, you don't know much about the chap. None of us do."

Man Forgets That "Of All Wonders, Man Is the Most Wonderful"

Cagney Wanted for Role In "Of Mice and Men"

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, May 28.—The deal is extremely hot to bring Elizabeth Bergner to Hollywood for the top feminine role in "We Are Not Alone," opposite Paul Muni. Until now, Miss Bergner has refused to come here unless her husband, Paul Cagney, directs the picture—but a compromise has been reached—Edmund Goulding will direct "We Are Not Alone" and Cagney will be handed the megaphone on another important picture in the same studio. Miriam Hopkins was originally intended for the Bergner part, but she is not suitable for the role of a German dancer straggling in England. As you perhaps remember, the story is about an English doctor—Muni—accused of murdering his wife—to be played by Flora Robson, who was excellent as the housekeeper in "Wuthering Heights."

Warners are preparing a picture based on the United States health service, to glorify the unheralded, meager-salaried scientists who do the work today to cure the sick to death. The cast includes Fay Bainter, John Garfield and Jeffrey Lynn.

The Nicolai Yoshkin who gave an outstanding performance as Goebbels in "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" has reverted to his original name, Martin Koselek, and plays an important part in "Career Man," with Joel McCrea. Koselek's own career has been interesting. Of Russian parentage, he studied with the Russian ballet and is a talented dancer. He paints very well, had an exhibition of his work last November at the Marie Stern galleries in New York. Not the least of Koselek's career highlights is that he went to school with Marlene Dietrich, of whom he recently made an excellent portrait study.

James Cagney may get to play the George role in "Of Mice and Men" after all. When Warners were after the play Jimmy was scheduled for the part, but when Hal Roach and Lewis Milestone bought it, Cagney ruled himself out of the running. But now Roach is negotiating with Warners for the loan of Cagney, who would be a natural for the part. . . . Florence Rice gets the lead opposite Edward G. Robinson in Metro's "Blackmail," and with the Marx Brothers in "A Day at the Circus." . . . Anna May Wong's option was not taken up by Paramount. . . . When Wallace Beery gets through with "Thunder Afloat," he stars in "Boss Tweed," all about the political goings-on in Tammany's early days. . . . By the way, Franchot Tone has been dropped from the "Thunder Afloat" epic on account of ill health.

Elsa Maxwell continues her career as an actress at Twentieth Century-Fox. After her current "Hotel for Women," the roly-poly party giver gets a role in "Public Debilitate Number One." Surely they don't mean Elsa? . . . Blanche Baines has the leading feminine role in "Deal in Hearts." Binnie is also paired with Randolph Scott in "Frontier Marshal." . . . Fay Bainter stars with Frank Craven in Paramount's "Our Neighbors, the Carters." She is also wanted for Metro's "It Can't Happen Here," from the Sinclair Lewis story. . . . Richard Greene and Nancy Kelly are supported by Roland Young in "Here I Am a Stranger." . . . Ina Claire has a role in "Ninotchka," starring Garbo. Hey, Mr. Lubitsch, I thought this was going to start for sure on May 22! (The studio now says May 23.)

That cute baby, Sandy, who entered our hearts via "East Side of Heaven," has been handed a starring contract all of her own ("he" is a girl). She will make two pictures with Misha Auer. . . . Edna Best, who is still the wife of Herbert Marshall, although they have been separated for years, has arrived in Hollywood to play the lead with Leslie Howard in "Interruption." I wonder, will she arrange for a divorce while in California? . . . Claudette Colbert has been signed for top role in "Drums Along the Mohawk," with Henry Fonda. . . . Charles Boyer will make a picture in France—war scare permitting—following "Modern Cinderella." He gets back here in October for "First Love," with Deanna Durbin. . . . Mary Martin, of "My Heart Belongs to Daddy," has signed a contract with Paramount.

Opinions Differ About Jump-Suit Overalls

By Harold Sharpsteen.

Bessemer, Ala.
Dear Mr. Sharpsteen:
"Members of my bridge club, who attended your Birmingham News Bridge School classes are still divided in their opinions as to whether or not a jump-suit overall made by a defensive bidder is a one-round force on partner, with no intervening bid. Some prefer to play it as a forcing-bid, while others in our club object, on the grounds that it is not supposed to be a force. For example:
South West North East
1 Heart 2 Spades Pass (?)
The question is: "Must East bid? Please clear up this point for us."

Mrs. H. T. J.
INVITES RESPONSE
West's jump overall of two spades invites a light response by East. But, it is not a positive force.

In general, some response should be made, partner holding about one trick, either an honor-trick or a ruffing trick.
-A ruffing trick consists of a singleton and three or more trumps. With a doubleton and three trumps, and one-half honor-trick outside, some response should be made.

BIDS TWO NOTRUMP
Lacking trump support, but holding one honor-trick or better, partner should respond two notrump.

A suit takeout of a jump overall usually reveals about 1-2 honor-tricks. With less the response should be two notrump. Obviously West's two spade overall reveals a strong hand, so East is expected to keep the bid open unless he holds a blank.

SEMI-FORCE
The jump overall is considered semi-forcing, but there is no logical reason why it is not just as safe a force as a takeout double. The jump overall bidder guarantees a rebid so the partnership seldom encounters trouble, for:
JUMP REQUIREMENTS
1. The jump overall shows 3-1-2 honor-tricks, with
2. Two five-card or longer bid-dable suits, or
3. A hand containing one strong rebid-dable suit, in all eight winners, as:
(a) S-A-K 10 6 5 D-A-Q J 8 3 H-6 C-4 3
(b) S-A-K 10 8 7 6 4 H-3 D-5 4 C-A-K 7

The Mortality From Diabetes Is High

By Ida Jean Kain.

After the furious agitation about having some kind of dancers to attract Fair visitors, you'd expect every man to make a beeline for the entertainment spots—but, no! They're crowding into the "Hall of Man" and testing their muscles.

According to an inscription about the entrance to the Hall: "Man wonders over the restless sea, the flowing water, the sight of the sky, and forgets that of all wonders man himself is the most wonderful." But once inside the Hall, most men seem to be completely absorbed in the marvelous exhibit by which science explains the human being.

Besides finding out how strong he is, the visitor can take his own pulse, test his lung power, and take a look at the bones in his own hand. A "pain man" is the life-size reproduction of the human torso, marked with 12 spots where pain most frequently occurs. When a button is pressed, a glass chart lights up, showing the probable cause of pain in that area and the organ from which it originates.

A talking skeleton with a lecture room manner breaks into speech at intervals to explain that his perfect bones are due to the fact that both he and his mother had plenty of calcium and vitamin D. With such a novel introduction to nutrition, it is not surprising that the nutrition charts, listing the foods essential to health, attract their rightful share of attention.

Among the most fascinating charts is one which estimates the number of calories required daily by persons engaging in various activities:

Occupation	Calories Required
Football player	6,000
Lumberjack	5,000
Woodcutter	4,900
Stonemason	4,238
Cabinet maker	3,232
Draftsman	2,380
Cobbler	2,668
Tailor	2,282
Loafers	1,920
Chambermaid	2,475
Laundress	2,419
Seamstress	2,186
Typist	1,640
Idle woman	1,320

Even though your occupation is not listed, one with comparable activity provides a check. Most business men are in the class with the draftsman and use around 2,300 calories a day—but a lot of them eat 3,000 anyway. And to be quite fair, there are few housewives who actually need more than the approximate 2,500 calories required by the chambermaid. If you are overweight, you have been overestimating your needs.

Still another chart—on diabetes—is a warning to anyone with diabetic heredity against becoming overweight. The mortality from diabetes is very much higher among the overweight.

The balanced menu of the foods essential to your well being, and enable you to reduce with benefit to your health.

One of the lovely beauty kits described below would bring to the face of any graduating miss the same smile Lana Turner is wearing in this picture made of her during the filming of "Calling Doctor Kildare."

An English Beauty Kit For Graduation Gift

By LILLIAN MAE.

Now that she's finished her school days, she's just about a grown-up lady. So treat her like a grown-up lady when you make that so-important gift in celebration of the event.

There's just the most darling make-up kit—very new, in fact, it has only this week been put on the market, just in time for the graduation season.

First, the kit itself is one of the neatest hand-bags you'd want to own. Oblong in shape, four by seven inches, with a double strap handle and a bronze safety lock, it comes in imitation pique of different colors. The flesh-colored lining is of washable fabric. You would never believe from looking at the bag that it could contain all the items it really does.

One side opens flat to reveal each in its separate holder, five products which are greatly responsible for the delicate, lovely complexion we so admire in English women. There's an English complexion cream for cleansing. And what a grand job it does of cleansing and softening the skin.

Then there's a bottle of toning lotion for clearing cream from the pores and generally toning and firming the skin. A bottle of complexion milk, smooth and refreshing, brings elasticity and luster to a dried skin. A marvelous foundation cream—one of the moist type which gives a dewy look to the complexion—and a box of the loveliest of face powders, complete the contents. All these items are delicately perfumed with the fragrance of Old English lavender.

In a special pocket there's a large-sized double-face mirror. Of course all the containers may be refilled and used indefinitely. Or, when empty, the bag is a stunning little hand-bag for the young lady.

It is ideal to carry in the hand, to hang on the inside door of the car, or to pack in the suitcase. The price, far from being what you would imagine, is only $3.50.

If you'll phone me, I'll tell you the name of the kit and where you may see one yourself. Then I know you'll rave over it and hasten to purchase at least one, to gladden the heart of the young lady you desire to please. If you do not live in Atlanta, write me, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

Work To Create a Proper Background For Furniture
By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.
The room really began with one chair—a plump little Victorian arm chair it was with a hand-carved rosewood frame. Lois K. had admired it at her great-aunt's stuffy old-fashioned house ever since she could remember. And when, in the ups and downs of the family story, the rosewood chair came into Lois' hands at about the same time she was starting to furnish her living room, it was only natural that the room should have been built around this nostalgic little piece.

Lois accumulated the right things—four Victorian style side chairs for her bridge ensemble and a Victorian what-not. With these she embellished odd and interesting pieces of 18th century English and 18th century French design. In this way the room, although it had decidedly Victorian flavor, was not stylized or quaint as an all-Victorian room is likely to be.

NOT FLAMBUYOYANT.
With her furniture collected, Lois got about creating a proper background for it. After quite a bit of thought and weeks of sample collecting, she bought yards of a very lovely chintz with a very pale dusty pink ground and a mel-

Girl Is Unhappy Account Family Handicap

By Caroline Chatfield.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:
Ever since I can remember there has been some family obligation that has kept me from reaching happiness and, now that I am 30 years old, past my youth, I must make the hardest decision I have yet to make. Mother died when I was quite young and I devoted my girlhood to father. He always said he would never remarry and I don't think he will. But he doesn't want me to marry, either; says I have a home and companionship and that should be enough.

A widower in the neighborhood has asked me to marry him and has told me frankly that he cannot ask father to make his home with us since he has his own mother living with him, taking care of his three children. Father looks utterly stricken when I mention leaving him, which cuts the heart out of me. Yet it is my duty to give up the only near prospect of happiness I have ever had and stay with father until he dies?

ANSWER:

It seems to me there's every reason why you should marry your widower, make a life for yourself and salvage the remaining years of your youth. Of course, manlike, your father doesn't realize that your life has been abnormal, that you have had all the responsibilities of running a home, making a man comfortable without the joys of romance and marriage and motherhood. He doesn't remember that once he persuaded a girl to leave her father and marry him and that he has had you all these years because of this fact. Then remind him in all kindness and ask him to be plucky and bid you Goodspeed.

It's true that many parents expect the daughters to be contented with plenty to eat and to wear, a place to sleep, and all bills paid. It doesn't occur to them that youth calls to youth and age cannot answer the call. They have forgotten the romantic stirrings of their young years. They cannot go back in memory to the days when affection of parents was not sufficient, to the days when they wanted a mate, a family, a home of their very own. They have been satisfied and they have forgot young yearnings.

Yet life moves on and in the nature of the case parents die long before their children and daughters' chances for marriage diminish with the years. Generally speaking, when the parents are gone, so are the prospects and the daughter who has sacrificed her life for her parents knows only a vicarious existence.

It isn't fair and it isn't necessary for one generation to be sacrificed to another except in instances of extreme poverty or illness. And so I say marry your widower and with your father living near by you can still be a good daughter to him without living under the same roof with him.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Woman's Quiz

Q. What foods are good sources for vitamin G?

A. Yeast; lean meats; eggs; whole or skinned, fresh, canned or dried milk; green leaves and the germ portion of cereals.

Q. How often should I wash my child's hair?

A. Once a week, winter and summer, and wash the brushes at the same time. It is best to use liquid soap, which can be prepared easily by heating soap shavings and water until the soap is dissolved.

Q. Is it proper to acknowledge wedding gifts by sending a printed or engraved card of thanks?

A. Nothing but a personal handwritten note will do.

Save you a household problem to solve. Write your question, clearly sign your name and address, enclose a three-cent postage stamp and mail to the Editor of The Constitution's Washington Service Bureau, 1015 15th Street, Washington, D. C. for a reply. Three of the most interesting answers will be printed daily. Don't telephone; write as directed.

My Day: Of Co-Op Venture

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

REEDSVILLE, W. Va.—We had a beautiful drive down yesterday. It was hazy but as the day advanced, it cleared and became quite warm and the view in the distance as we went into the mountain was very beautiful.

We stopped at Romney, W. Va., as usual, for lunch and most of us found West Virginia ham a very satisfactory dish. On the sidewalk, as we came out of the inn, there were a number of people. Among them was an elderly lady who said that her family had not wanted her to try to see me because they felt that it would be impossible, but she had come because she was so anxious to know whether the President was using the quilt which she had sent him. Assured on that point, she left apparently entirely satisfied.

We arrived at the Arthurdale Inn and, having deposited our bags, started out at once for Scott's Run. There a real thrill awaited us. Jere, which has always seemed to me a sad place filled with people lacking all hope and initiative, was buzzing with life. The two ministers who came to see me last year about a community house for Scott's Run, were on hand, also Mr. Bushrod Grimes.

When I inquired why so many people were out in gala attire, they said they had gathered to show me their first co-operative venture. It was an outdoor baking unit which they had built themselves, and leaves upon loaves of delicious looking bread lay upon a table in a shack near-by. All of us tasted it and we took home a loaf to eat. Then we were driven to the top of a hill to see the community gardens just being planted, and on to the shack further up the run where material was being gathered from the nearby towns, to be salvaged by the people.

Old workmen will teach younger members of the community their trade. A blacksmith and three cobblers, with their tools, have been discovered among the unemployed miners. This activity has meant the difference between a kind of living death and a creative activity in an effort to save themselves. The faces of the people are alive again. It was, perhaps, one of the most interesting experiences I have had in this region, which has taught me so many lessons.

I held two meetings in the evening, one with a group of local veterans, and one with the executive committee of the homesteaders club of Arthurdale.

We started out a little after nine this morning to visit the park in a wooded area, the cemetery plot, the new tractor factory, which I think has great possibilities. I was interested to discover that a new type is being developed which may be used to advantage on rather small acreage. Then we saw the dairy which is now being leased by the co-operative association to two of the homesteaders, who also lease land to grow feed for the cows. After a meeting with two groups from Morgantown, and also with a group of people interested in the school, we lunched with the faculty at the school and went over to the commencement exercises.

To Know Is Not To Worry; To Worry Is Not To Know

By Dr. William Brady.

(Signed letters pertaining to personal health and medical questions, diagnosis or treatment, will be answered by Dr. William Brady, M.D., in a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Letters should be brief and written in ink. Owing to the large number of letters received only a few can be answered. Please do not expect answers to queries not conforming to instructions. Address Dr. William Brady, care of The Atlanta Constitution.)

A reader told me recently that she formerly passed up this column because I seemed to discuss obscure troubles that did not interest her, but lately she has become interested because I seem to discuss subjects of importance to everybody.

It is human nature. I am likely to assume that anything that interests me should interest nearly everybody.

Once I was thrown out of a southern newspaper on my ear by the irate publisher. He had been having a common complaint, and in glancing over the paper he came upon an item in my column warning that a diagnosis of hemorrhoids made without an examination sometimes leads to disaster, for the presumptive piles may prove to be, well, cancer, for instance.

The publisher was properly, I say properly, scared. He rushed off to a doctor for examination. The doctor made a careful examination and assured the publisher that the condition was not cancer. Instead of sending me a new pipe or anything like that the publisher simply threw me out. He was not going to have his readers frightened to death by any da-da-da doctor as long as he was running the paper.

On the other hand I have received a few letters from readers who thanked me for having taught them the wisdom of early examination by a doctor, when such procedure happened to lead to recognition of the grave nature of the trouble and prompt surgery in time to save life.

Without malice aforethought I beg to call attention to the simple fact that we fear and worry about what we do not know or understand. To know is not to worry. To worry is not to know.

The fight against cancer is primarily an individual fight. Sooner or later cancer occurs in every family, if not in this generation then in the next. Therefore there is no sense in trying to avoid thinking about it. At least every intelligent person ought to know these things about cancer:

1. Pain is usually not felt in the early stage of cancer. To wait for pain to drive you to the doctor is reckless.

2. Any persistent lump or thickening anywhere in the body, but especially in the breast, in one past thirty, may possibly be cancer.

3. Any sore that does not heal, especially a sore about the mouth, tongue or lips, may be cancer.

4. Any irregular bleeding or discharge from any body opening may be cancer.

5. Persistent "indigestion" occurring in a person past thirty who has not been subject to such trouble earlier in life, especially if accompanied with loss of weight, may be cancer.

6. Sudden change in the form, appearance or rate of growth of a long existing wart, mole or papule may be cancer.

Nine times out of ten perhaps such a danger signal will be found insignificant, when the physician makes a careful examination. But my advice in any case is: Don't worry. Find out.

NEW PIG'N WHISTLE PRESENTS SOME UNUSUAL FEATURES

$50,000 BUILDING IS NOW COMPLETED ON PONCE DE LEON

Has Served Over Ten Million Sandwiches Since Opening in 1928.

When one takes into consideration the attractive place and the quality of excellent food served, it is not surprising to learn that Pig'n Whistle, located at 295 Ponce de Leon avenue, has served more than 10,000,000 sandwiches since it opened in 1928—more than a million a year.

And now, to the gratification of Harold T. Hagan, president of the company operating Pig'n Whistles, he is pleased to present a new and beautiful structure at the Ponce de Leon location in which to serve his friends.

The spacious drive-in court is paved for attractive appearance and the convenience of guests, whether they choose to be served in their cars or in the several inviting rooms inside.

The main dining room is large enough to assure a comfortable table for every guest even during rush hours.

A men's grill is a new feature offering true country club relaxation and service.

The place is so attractively arranged for convenience and entertainment of guests that it is intriguing visitors to ask to see behind the scenes. Mr. Hagan has designated guides to show visitors through the entire plant, modern kitchens and all.

In this new Ponce de Leon place and also the Pig'n Whistle at 2143 Peachtree road, a favorite specialty with the eating house and with patrons, is that they serve barbecued chicken, planked steaks and old-fashioned barbecue dinners.

In a brief statement to the public, here is what the management says about the new Ponce de Leon Pig'n Whistle:

"Our kitchen has been built so that we can keep it spotlessly clean at all times. We invite you to inspect it. All equipment is stainless steel.

"There are five electric refrigerators to keep our food fresh at all times.

"We have installed a Mills automatic ice cream maker to make our own extra rich ice cream fresh daily.

"We think you will enjoy the light airy and well ventilated upstairs dining room. A large fan in the attic exhausts 15,000 cubic feet of air each minute, thereby insuring fresh cool air in the dining room.

"The men's grill downstairs should appeal to many men. A variety of dishes men like will be served in the grill. The bar will also do its part to make you enjoy your visit. The grill will be reserved on certain nights for parties and banquets.

"The counter service room upstairs will be open 24 hours a day. Breakfast will be served. It provides a nice spot for a quick lunch or just a snack late at night or a bottle of your favorite beverage.

"We have enlarged our parking lot where it will accommodate over 200 cars. There are 35 car service boys to give you prompt, courteous service to your car. We will endeavor to serve orders to cars within five minutes after they are given to the car service boy."

Handsome New Pig'n Whistle on Ponce de Leon

This popular place, along with other Pig'n Whistle at 2143 Peachtree road, features fashioned barbecue dinners. Visitors are invited to inspect this new and popular place.

Henry W. Gullatt Hands Out 'Hot Fish' to 'Cold Men'

Showing a gathering of business friends of Henry W. Gullatt, manufacturers agent, at his guests at a fish fry at the Venetian Club Thursday evening. Mr. Gullatt is shown in the center, kneeling and pulling the fish out of the sizzling pan of hot grease.

'Hot Fish' Served 'Cold Men' At Venetian Club by Gullatt

By PRESS HUBLESTON.

The many scores of men in and around Atlanta—in fact, anywhere in Georgia—whose business it is to look after refrigeration of foodstuffs, or other things that need cooling attention, hold Henry W. Gullatt in mighty high esteem. They esteem him not only as a businessman who knows how to greatly aid them in their routine of keeping things cool, but they like him because he is a genial, loyal friend and good fellow—and as a host and fish-fryer they declare he has but few equals, and no superior.

This was proven Thursday evening at the Venetian Club, when Mr. Gullatt entertained some 50 or more of his business and personal friends at a most enjoyable fish fry. If you will take a glance at the picture herewith you will see the genial host on one knee forking the tender, delicious little pan trout out of the frying pan, and preparing a genuine feast for his guests.

Gullatt, you can see, was preparing "hot fish" for "cold men," for the guests you see standing around and about represent the many and varied industries throughout the city where it is their business to keep things cool. Not only that. Look what they hold in their hands. Certainly they are not holding milkshakes—not with fish so ready to serve.

In a few minutes they will be eating hot pan trout, fine, firm tomatoes, tender little radishes, appetizing onions, and what have you, to go along with a real fish fry. At the gathering were assembled men representing ice plants, ice cream plants, candy manufacturers, bakeries, dairies, hotels, packing plants, air conditioning, refrigeration machinery manufacturers, refrigeration equipment service men, produce men, hospitals—well, you know what I mean.

It is the work of Henry W. Gullatt, manufacturers' agent, together with a co-worker, W. J. Collier, to supply the products that the plants mentioned above use in the course of their cooling operations. Mr. Gullatt's place of business is at 29 Haynes street, N. W. He supplies anhydrous ammonia, calcium chloride, methyl chloride, sulphur dioxide, freon (F-12), and such like, to his refrigerator friends. And they know they can depend upon Mr. Gullatt, for he is trained in the business of servicing, managing, selling, installing, maintaining refrigeration equipment, and in doing the many things that help to keep foods fresh and in supplying "cold."

And besides all that—he knows how to fry fish.

TARZAN AND THE FIRES OF TOHR No. 79

"The Fires of Tohr" Tarzan repeated grimly.
"This must be the fiery pit into which Achea hurts her prisoners as a sacrifice to Pantu." Major Burton observed. Tarzan nodded and pointed upward. Above the pillar of flame was an opening in a section of stones.

The monstrous column of fire licked through the opening like the tongue of a hungry dragon.
Then the stones moved, the hole began to close.
As the draft was released, the flames sank gradually into the pit. Suddenly, from above, came a ghastly, terrified cry.

The figure of a man hurtled down, flashed past the horrified spectators, and plunged into the seething, bubbling pit. "Pantu, god of fire, has claimed another victim," Major Burton lamented.
"And that's what we're in for if we're caught," Perry added gravely.

As the column of flame dropped back to its source, a stone bridge was revealed, spanning the abyss. But that gave the fugitives no hope for the iron-barred gate blocked their way. And somewhere in the corridor behind them the yellow-men were drawing nearer!
